Wife of suspect says 'victim' made up charges

By Steve Marschke

The wife of a man accused of imprisoning and abusing another woman in the couple's Maple St. home for three days said Tuesday that the alleged crime never occurred.

Judith Whitehorn, wife of suspect Norman Whitehorn, 56, said the alleged victim was a former houseguest and is making up the story to get even with the Whitehorns for kicking her out.

The imprisonment and assault are alleged to have occurred from May 12 to May 14, said Sgt. Rick Mayoral of the West Sacramento Police Department.

The 25-year old transient woman first reported the matter to the police on May 19, he added, saying that police "don't have an answer" to why she may have waited so long to report a possible crime.

The News-Ledger generally does not report the names of alleged victims of sexual assault.

Although Whitehorn is the only suspect in jail following the report (he is charged with attempted rape and false imprisonment), the woman said a second man also assaulted her at the house.

"Another witness substantiated what she said (about Whitehorn), but didn't substantiate what she said about the other man," said Mayoral. "That doesn't mean that he won't be charged."

Following a search of the house, Whitehorn was arrested for the alleged crime a week ago.

His wife, Judith, says that he is being railroaded by West Sacramento police because he is an ex-con who served 30 years for a violent crime.

"My husband was in prison for 30 years for rape and murder. What somebody did 30 years ago had nothing to do with the man he is now. That was a 19-year old kid."

She said that she had caught her husband and the two having sexual relations, but that it was not rape. And she said the woman only left the household after she was kicked out -- and she later came back for her things.

"When I gave her back her clothes and things, I cut up some of her clothes," said Judith Whitehorn. "She said, "I'll get even with you."

The woman, who came to the Whitehorns' residence after staying at the Pick Wick motel, said that at one time Norman Whitehorn restrained her and tried to inject narcotics into her while a second man attempted unsuccessfully to rape her.

"There was evidence in there that substantiated what she said," commented Sgt. Mayoral.

Among the evidence taken from the house by police (according to a police list) were some drug paraphernalia which Judith Whitehorn said belonged to the other man, and some plastic tubing which she said was used for her aquarium -- but which, she said, police believe her husband used to tie up the victim. Also taken were a shotgun and some ammunition that Judith purchased, she said, but which were illegal to have in Norman's residence.

The victim told police she stayed with the couple and had sex with Norman Whitehorn because she was afraid for her safety if she tried to leave.

Judith Whitehorn, who works part time for the local school district, said the police have been harassing the pair because of her husband's record.

"The police decide you can't live here," she said. "If he's guilty of this crime here, I'd be the first one to say, 'get the rope.' But he didn't do it."

She said her husband is awaiting the appointment of a public defender.

Just tidying up. . .

Beautification volunteers tackled Jefferson Boulevard and Interstate 80 interchange on Saturday, June 4. The beautification volunteers removed 14 bags of trash, 2 tires, and a bed frame from this site. The city has been negotiating with Cal Trans for an encroachment permit for property for some time.

The permit was granted and now the beautification volunteers are able to maintain the site four times a year.

Corrections

The News-Ledger incorrectly identified the first name and age of the murder victim reported in last week's issue.

Dean Janssen, 40, was the man found dead of a gunshot wound. As was reported last week, two suspects have been arrested in that case.

The News-Ledger regrets the error.

One more honor student:

The name of Chad Patterson was inadvertantly left out of the list of fifth grade honor students at Our Lady of Grace School which was printed last week.

To make up for this omission, we'll mention the name of Chad Patterson twice this week.

Congratulations to him and all the honor students!

Board okay's hiring of supe's spouse

By David Weller

The Washington School Board voted unanimously to hire Brenda Miller, wife of Superintendant Dr. David Miller, as the new Physical Education teacher at Golden State Middle School.

By the accounts of people involved in the hiring process, Brenda Miller has extraordinary qualifications, and will fit well into the position. They also stressed that she had to go through the same screening and hiring process as all the other candidates, and that Dr. Miller had no part in that process.

"We decided going in that we were going to hire the best candidate regardless of personal relationships," said Golden State Principal Diane Smith.

Miller has a bachelor's degree and a master's degree in Physical Education. She has been an athletic director, and she has coached at the middle school and high school levels. She also has an elementary school teaching credential, which would give her the flexibility to fill in at elementary schools if that should become necessary.

Assistant Superintendant of Personnel Dr. Dennis Kellegher, who screened the applications but did not participate in the interviews, said, that "on paper, Brenda Miller was far and away the number one candidate."

That position was echoed by outgoing school board President Hal Williams, who said he had no problem voting to approve her hiring because she was "far and away the best qualified applicant."

Williams had made a campaign issue of the hiring of relatives and friends of board members and administrators. In a June interview with the News-Ledger he criticized former board member and newspaper reporter John Siden for being on the board when his wife was hired.

"Your newspaper has a writer who was on the board for 17 years, who employed his wife as a teacher while he was on the board. He consistently voted for teacher raises," said Williams.

Williams also said that former Superintendant Del Alberti was involved in the hiring of an inept Maintenance Supervisor whose parents Williams suspected were friends and neighbors of Alberti's parents.

New cop car colors?

By Steve Marschke

Having secured a new and better headquarters -- which will be ready in about a year -- the West Sacramento Police Department has turned its attention to color schemes.

The distinctive burgundy and white colors of the city's patrol cars may soon be replaced by the more traditional black-and-white sported by most other law enforcement agencies, if the new police chief (and a reported majority of the department have their way.

"(Black and white) seems to be more recognizable as a police vehicle," said Chief Larry Gore. "Magenta -- the color they've been painted -- is a bit unusual in the profession."

Gore added that, aside from making the patrol cars "more recognizable," the color change would help create a "new image" for the department. When Gore came on board as the new chief last year, it was to greet a department mired in labor and morale difficulties.

"It's going to create a new image, and it seems like the right time to do it," he commented.

"We're doing a lot of new things in the department and we're excited about it."

At least one citizen disagrees with the plan to repaint.

Helena Helmold, a community activist and member of a city economic commission, said the old colors are "elegant and exclusive."

"And having the cars be white is very practical in the heart we have in Sacramento. A lot of people think that this was one of the things Barry Kalar (the city's first police chief) did right."

Helmold said that the money earmarked to re-paint patrol cars should be spent elsewhere.

"We'd like to see the motorcycle cops come back," she argued. "We'd like to see the police get decent radios, so they don't have to change them mid-shift. Nearly everyone I've talked to feels it's a downer.

Gore responded that the cost to change colors on existing police vehicles (around 15in all) is expected to cost only about $7,000, and that this amount has been collected through budget savings. After the department's current vehicles are repainted, he said, future ones would simply be ordered in black and white, and no recurring costs would pile up.

"It's a very tight budget," he commented. "Through proper budget administration and the fact that we came in well under our budget, we've saved enough money to do this."

The painting job will be awarded through a competitive bidding process, he said.

Reminder from local fire marshal: all fireworks are illegal in West Sacto

From Mike Foley
West Sacramento Fire Marshal

Each year in the very short period leading up to and including the Fourth of July, nearly 13,000 people are injured by fireworks.

It makes no difference whether the fireworks are "safe and sane" or illegal. In addition to injuries, estimates taken from a fireworks industry newsletter acknowledged that as recently as 1992, fireworks related fires contributed to over 6 million dollars in property loss in the United States.

Closer to home, in California, the state fire marshall's office recently released information indicating that in 1993, 169 Californians were injured in the time frame from June 17 through July 16. This information was compiled in cooperation with hospital emergency rooms in California. Statistics included information on types of fireworks involved in the injuries and which areas of the body were harmed.

The information gathered indicates that the age group sustaining the greatest number of injuries are young adults between 11 and 16 years old. Most of these young adults are injured from seemingly harmless wire core, sparklers. The most likely injured body parts are the face and eyes due to exploding firecrackers and M80's.

There is no doubt that given the relatively short time frame that fireworks are purchased during the year, a tremendous amount of damage and suffering is sustained by Californians. In the past ten years the data retrieved by hospital emergency rooms indicates an alarming number of preventable injuries.

This year, the state fire marshall is expanding the data collection resource pool to include local medical clinics. In the pas these clinics may have treated injured children that might not have shown up on hospital emergency rooms records. As a result of expanded survey, 1994 may indicate an even greater number of injuries.

The city of West Sacramento has long since understood the danger of all fireworks and has banned both "safe and sane" and illegal devices.

It is illegal to manufacture, possess, sell or discharge fireworks of any kind in West Sacramento.

Tips from citizens:

No arrests, but police following leads in Broderick burglary cases

By Steve Marschke

No arrests have yet been made in a string of daylight burglaries plaguing West Sacramento's Broderick neighborhood.

But Sgt. Rick Mayoral of the West Sacramento Police Department said Tuesday that the department has received helpful information from the public and is focusing its investigation on several individuals.

He credited publicity from the News-Ledger as helping to encourage citizens to come forward with information on the burglaries, and said the department has a couple of suspects.

"We're trying to get some kind of physical evidence to connect them to the crimes," he said.

Can you stand one more column on the O.J. Simpson thing?

I was flipping through the Sacramento Bee the other day and I ran across yet another column on O.J. Simpson. This one was by Pete Dexter and was entitled, "Presumption of Ugliness in Simpson Saga." It talked about--among other things--how justice is no longer really relevant to court proceedings in the United Sates--which I happen to agree with--and how lawyers, judges, and the law itself often make it almost impossible for twelve relatively rational human beings to come up with the correct verdict.

Dexter's piece is just one of dozens I've seen in the past few weeks on Simpson, and that's just the print media. When I turn on my radio, I hear 911 tape recordings of an obviously frightened Nicole Simpson screaming for help as her ex-husband breaks into her condominium; when I flip on the television set, every nightly newscast leads with the latest information on the O.J. case; all the talk shows are talking about little else, and even my kids are becoming experts on O.J.'s chances of staying out of the gas chamber.

"People are saying that there's this big conspiracy--and that he was framed," explained my daughter.

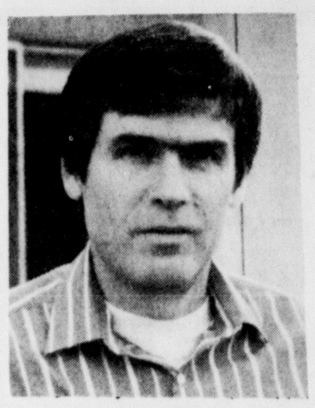
"Is that right?" I asked. "By whom?"

"The Mafia," answered one of my sons.

"Really?"

"People magazine says that maybe Al Cowlings did it--that he was jealous of O.J.'s wife," added another one of my sons.

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

"I don't think I've heard that one before, I said.

"It's such a tragedy--all the way around," said my wife.

"Especially if you were Nicole Simpson or Ron Goldman," added my daughter, hitting the nail on the head.

As for me, one particular moment seemed to frame the whole ugly mess. A few hours after Al Cowlings had finished motoring O.J. around Los Angeles while the Juice held a gun to his own head, one of the networks did a man on the street interview with an obviously shaken middle-aged man who looked directly in the camera, shook his head and said, "You know, nothing makes sense in this country anymore."

I think that's a fair statement to make when you consider that a whole nation seems like it can think and talk of nothing else accept the plight of a guy who used to be pretty good at running around with a football, racing through airports, and acting silly in silly movies?

What happened to a country which used to be overflowing with generation after generation of real heroes? And I'm not just talking recent history, either. Remember the patriots who dumped all that tea into Boston Harbor and told the English to go take a walk; and all those brave agitators, politicians, and soldiers in blue who decided to end slavery once and for all; or all those immigrants whose blood flows through us all and who risked everything to start over from scratch in America; and doughboys like my grandfather who volunteered to go across the big pond to help make the world safe for democracy; and all the World War Two veterans like my dad who spent four long years in the Pacific doing his part to rid the world of totalitarianism. Real heroes--who lived real lives--used to be everywhere. And not only did we look up to them, but we valued what they said, admired their work ethic, honored their sacrifices, and vowed to try to live up to their standards.

Now our heroes are nothing more than an over the hill football player with a lengthy history of spousal abuse, or baseball and basketball athletes who make ridiculous amounts of money playing games for a few months each year, skilled politicians who believe in nothing except finding some way--any way--to get reelected, famous actors and actresses who have nothing meaningful to say unless someone has written the words for them, and rock and roll stars who grab their crotch and walk backwards or scream out degrading lyrics which mercifully can rarely be understood.

I am exactly O.J. Simpson's age and I can fondly recall the way he used to slice through the line of scrimmage, break into the open with Reggie McKenzie still in front of him, cut back against the grain, and outrace hypnotized defenders as an out of breath color commentator screamed, "The Juice is loose!" But I always knew that he was just a football player, just like I knew that winning the Super Bowl can't be all that big a deal if they have to play it again the next year.

If we are going to insist on having heroes, then at the very least, we should take great care in choosing them. But after weeks of nothing but O.J. Simpson this and O.J. Simpson that, what I really think this country needs--is to get a life.

RiverFest scheduled for Friday

Sacramento RiverFest '94 is celebrating the river's historic, economic and recreational splendor.

Scheduled for Saturday, July 2, the celebration will go throughout the day. Events for the whole family include classic boat displays, bicycle rides, horseback trail rides, wagon and carriage rides, train rides, in-line skate demonstrations, canoe and kayak demonstrations, nature walks, a sea kayak celebrity race, rowing races and demonstrations, food, music, and a yacht parade. The activities will be spread throughout Old Sacramento, Discovery Park, Miller Park, Crocker Park and West Sacramento.

The event is being sponsored by the Friends of the Sacramento River Greenway, a citizens' group, to promote the economic, recreational, and natural potential of the Sacramento River.

Says chair Anne Rudin, "Sacramento RiverFest '94 will be a fun and exciting event that should boost enthusiasm in the community for the great opportunities that exist along the Sacramento River. To become a strong competitor in the state and the nation for economic activity, Sacramento needs to take full advantage of all its potential, including adding to its river recreation activities."

Sacramento RiverFest is a special event of Friends of the Sacramento River Greenway. The group is particpating in the development and adoption of plans to provide for recreational opportunities, strategic economic development and riparian restoration along the river.

The group is also actively seeking and supporting funding opportunities for the various projects which will improve the riverside environment within the city and county, including a continuous parkway linking to the American River Parkway.

Opening lead — king of spades.

The most important aim when you are declarer is to make the contract if it can be made, and the most important aim when you are a defender is to beat the contract if it can be beaten.

These goals may be achieved by following a fundamental principle. You always assume that the cards lie in a way that will enable you to meet your goal, rather than in a way that will prevent your achieving it. Very often, this assumption will prove false, but there is little to be lost by adopting the more optimistic view.

Here is a typical case. West leads the king of spades against four hearts and is faced with the problem of how to continue at trick two. His correct play is a low club, which defeats the contract after East takes the ace, returns a club to the king, and gets a club ruff for the defense's fourth trick.

Most players wouldn't dare lead a club from the king at trick two. The specter of South having the ace would freeze them in their tracks and induce them to make a "safer" play.

This is the wrong view. West has no choice but to assume that East has the ace of clubs, because that is a necessary assumption to defeat the contract. He must also assume that the ace is doubleton, for otherwise it is next to impossible to imagine scoring four tricks.

It is true that a club lead might lose a trick, but it never loses the contract. The trick that may be lost is a drop in the bucket compared to what could be lost by not leading a club.

Survival Tool

A sewing machine is an appliance, a convenience. But for many people in the world's poorest countries, it means much more. A sewing machine means clothing. Clothing means money. Money means food for a hungry family overseas.

We turn a tap. Out comes clean water. But in too many places throughout the world, a drink of water can be a death sentence. So the construction of a well means survival. Because clean water means no dysentery. No dysentery means life for an entire community overseas.

Books. Our libraries are filled with them. But for children living in countries where reaching school age is, in itself, a miraculous accomplishment, a book can have almost magical powers. A book means learning. Learning means knowledge. Knowledge means a chance for a better life for a child living in poverty overseas.

These are but a few of the many tools for survival made possible by Childreach sponsorship through self-help partnerships with poor families and communities overseas.

But survival is just the beginning.

As a Childreach sponsor, your caring and generosity can help bring new hope and a real chance for a better life to a special child you will get to know through pictures and letters. OPINION

Guest opinion:

New state crime report: mostly good news

by California Attorney General Daniel Lungren

At various times of the year, my office issues statistics reflecting reported crimes in California. Our latest report, "Crime and Delinquency -- Advanced Release", is the first which details crime rate information for the past year from all reporting law enforcement agencies in the state and gives us the most accurate look at crime trends in California for 1993.

The report showed that in our state the number of crimes reported per 100,000 population decreased by 3.5% in 1993, with the violent crime rate accounting for a 4.1% drop and the property crime rate falling by 3.3%.

Specifically, the data shows that the rate of forcible rapes were down by 9.1%, aggravated assaults declined by 3.4%, robberies decreased by 4.8%, burglaries were reduced by 4.5%, and motor vehicle thefts dropped by 1.6%. Homicide, on the other hand, was up by a rate of 3.2%

The report contains mostly good news. However, does it mean that it's time to stop toughening our approach to crime? Should we stop and wonder if we've gone too far? Not on your life.

California still has a gang problem that is largely out of control. Drug violence is ruling some neighborhoods. Random violence is affecting the lives of every Californian.

This is no time to stop demanding tougher sentences for criminals. Yet calls for a return to the go-easy-on-criminals approach are increasing and the people of this state need to be aware of the danger and remain vigilant.

Whether it's an attempt to weaken the tough "Three Strikes" law -- which has barely begun to have an impact -- or attempts in Congress to eliminate the death penalty through artfully-named legislation like the "Radical Justice Act," people need to do more than listen to their elected officials.

It's easy to talk tough on crime, and this year, nearly everybody will do it. But people who are sick and tired of our state's go-easy approach to criminals need to do more than listen, they need to watch. Watch the actions of your elected officials and see if it matches their tough talk.

Local student's essay: youth, age, sex appeal & ads

Pat Warriner, a West Sacramento woman and re-entry student at CSU Sacramento, won a university-wide "critical analysis" award for this essay. The contest was open to both graduate and undergraduate students. Warriner is an undergraduate studying English at the university.

By Pat Warriner

The moment I turned the page in the Sunday New York Times magazine insert and saw the Banana Republic advertisement, my senses were assaulted. I expected a couple of young college types -- perhaps a blonde cheerleader and varsity quarterback -- modeling brightly colored shirts and baggy pants. I expected action, energy, and raw, youthful, sex appeal.

What I found instead were images of an older woman and man, both wearing confident, thoughtful, peaceful expressions and crisp, white Banana Republic shirts. I could almost smell the cleanness of the fabric. Stillness resonated between the couple. The uncluttered, meditative quality of the ad took my breath away. Peering closely at the ad was like intruding upon the souls of two very beautiful and holy people. I succumbed, desiring for myself the solitude and immovable peace they seemed to possess. Intuitively, I realized that my scrutiny and hunger were welcomed, invited, even intended by Banana Republic, and I knew it was only a matter of time before my quest for beauty and simplicity would veer from the images on the page and turn within.

The ad contained no real youthful images except the woman's upturned collar, which gave her a "preppie" New England look, and the man's long, neat hair combed to the middle of his back, that recalled images of a hippie caught in a timewarp, or perhaps a sage medicine man or sachem. These attributes contrasted with deep wrinkles easily visible on their faces and hands, lifelines etched in leather patterns, attesting to challenges met and knowledge acquired over time.

Her hair was short; his was long. Genders blurred. Neither appeared traditionally masculine or feminine. They wore identical plain white oxford styled shirts, strengthening the sense of simplicity, beauty, and sameness that enveloped them.

Sex appeal? It was there, but elusive. Looking at the couple's photos, I was certain the calm, easy demeanor each reflected to the camera's eye was not accidental, nor was it an isolated achievement. They clearly belonged together.

This ad was not about sex as we've come to expect with traditional American advertising, though. With steady, focused, visionary gazes, this older man and woman appeared to look beyond themselves and the superficial taglines associated with typical marketing ploys. Banana Republic, international manufacturer of casual clothing, was suddenly speaking my language! They were confirming what many of us have long believed; aging can be a beautiful, comfortable, graceful process.

Banana Republic contrived an innovative and relevant strategy to rob me of a false sense of security, while enticing me to go within to find my own goodness, beauty, and holiness. They had hit the marketing scene with a bold concept: use mature models in selected American advertising media, continue to envision a future that we must grasp, shape, and give back to a younger generation still seeking its way.

American marketing strategies for most of the twentieth century have focused almost exclusively on youth and sex appeal to sell products to a young, mobile, throw-away society. A basic technique of this ideology is exploitation of this generalization; every young man's hope is to attract the sexy, leggy blonde instead of the wallflower, and a young woman's dream is to catch the muscular, handsome guy rather than settling for something less. Sex sells.

The idea worked well through the 1970's and 1980's, as attested by myriad products and services on the market today. Manufacturers would have us believe that the guy with the fastest, hottest car gets his girl, or that only a shampoo leaving hair its softest and shiniest will enable a girl to snag her man.

The approach works fine so long as most consumers are young and eager to buy "things" to satisfy their sense of well-being and self-worth. It's precisely this consumer focus on "me" and "what feels good to me" that ensnares so many in the trap of associating more material possessions with personal happiness and more attractive lifestyles.

So long as we believe advertising mirrors life's ideals -- if only for the moment it takes to buy one product of service over another -- youthfulness and sex appeal will continue to flood marketing strategies.

For some time, though, those traditional strategies haven't worked especially well on me. I'm a 40-year-old woman. It takes more than flashy twenty-year old smiles, clothes, and cars to part me from my money. I've spent more than 17 years in a stable professional career. In a fe more years, I want to leave the corporate rat race, and fulfill some 40-year-old dreams. Glitzy, fast-track advertising no longer speaks to my priorities.

Perhaps, at last, I've come to own for myself the adage that beauty resides closer to the soul than the face. Youth gives way to aging, no matter what kind or car one drives; hair turns grey or falls out, regardless of brand of shampoo or degree of shine in one's hair; and unblemished complexions succumb to lifelines and crow's feet, in spite of the cost or volume of oils and agent applied to one's skin. In other words, assets droop or bulge thanks to forces beyond our control; the bells and whistles of our virile or fertile youth sound slower, quieter and, perhaps, less frequently than they once may have.

Banana Republic demonstrated what most other manufacturers have ignored or may not understand. For the first time in American history, the largest segment of our consumer population is past the age of 40. For baby boomers like me, as well as for those of an older generation, perhaps the reflection of our inner peace and holiness, our calm and quiet sense of self-confidence, and the simple pleasure of another's presence and footfall in step with us, are of paramount importance. Just maybe we need to call upon the transitory attribute so four youth to gently, gracefully, and comfortably give ground, enabling our quest for a holier, simpler, more beautiful measure of our worth to emanate from our hearts instead of our pocketbooks.

It matters not whether you are a subscriber or an advertiser or neither, items sent in by any resident of Washington will be welcomed.

The Sacramento River registered 13 feet 4 inches, U. S. gauge at the bridge, yesterday.

Not a case has been before the Justice Court during the past week and although Washington is wet grass is springing up in the jailyard strong enough to obliterate any tracks that might have formerly been made. It is different in dry towns where the blind pigs keep a well-beaten path open to the calaboose doors.

School Trustees, Mrs. M. L. Manchester and Mrs. Parkinson, returned from San Francisco last Saturday where they had gone to examine desks and chairs for the new school building. Their decision favored a combination desk and chair of the movable type. Bids will not be let, however, for these furnishings until after the contract for the school building has been let. The examination made by the two trustees was only preliminary and final decision will not be made until the end of May or the beginning of June.

Two skeletons were found yesterday afternoon on the old mound on Margaret street, between Fifth and Sixth, by James Lear and Jerry Dillon, who were digging for a cesspool on the Harbinson property. This place was formerly an old Indian burying ground and at various times skeletons have been found without causing comment. The skull of one of these skeletons was in fairly good condition, all the teeth being still imbedded in the jaw bone. The other was more or less decayed. With the skeletons were found a great number of beads.

Last Tuesday Pat Mulholland, after cooking breakfast forgot to turn off his gasoline stove and while out fishing his scow took fire. A neighbor across the river saw the blaze and went to the trouble of extinguishing the fire, endangering his life thereby. Mr. Clark, the pump man at the Natomas, saved the scow from being burned to the water's edge. Pat lost $9.15 which he had in his vest pocket and which was thrown in the river to stop the fire.

P. A. Hart and August Brietzke are about to enter into the wood business on the free market plan in due earnestness. They explain that the free market idea is a very good one, that is to say the yard will be free of entrance to all comers. Both of them are energetic individuals usually with several irons in the fire and in addition are very patriotic at this moment, for on their pile of wood in the free market at Second and Mary streets, an American flag floats to the breeze all the time.

Mrs. M. Stucki has received word from her husband who deserted her about a year ago, leaving her to support three young children. He is located at Youngstown, Ohio, and the authorities have been placed on his trail.

The masquerade ball planned for April 14th by several young ladies of Washington promises to be a most enjoyable affair and a financial success in addition. Many young women are preparing novel costumes and many young men are getting up original ones. There is considerable rivalry because the prizes to be offered are very substantial.

A dangerous runaway took place yesterday afternoon, when a heavy team of horses with an empty wagon ran from in front of the grocery store. The driver had stepped in to get some tobacco and in some way the team became frightened. West along the railroad track they went to Fifth where they crossed and were stopped by an automobile driver near Eighth street. Four horses were attached to the rear end of the wagon and they, too, did some running. Neither horses or harness were damaged in the runaway.

THIRD ANNIVERSARY OF WASHINGTON IMPROVEMENT CLUB WILL BE CELEBRATED ON APRIL 10

ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF THE ORGANIZATION WILL BE RECORDED AND GOOD SPEAKERS MAY BE INVITED FOR THE OCCASION

On March 31, 1914, the organization of the Washington Improvement Club was completed and since then the work accomplished through the organization has been of material benefit to the town.

Many affairs of municipal importance have been promoted and many little mistakes have been corrected which would not otherwise have been done had there been no such organization.

There still remain many objects to be accomplished and many formidable questions to be settled but without the united support of all the taxpayers those things cannot be done.

Some few faithful souls have continuously worked for the benefit of the club and the benefit of the community. They need more encouragement. More of the property owners should be active because the club is of one mind, a mind that contemplates, not the advancement of any individual, but the general good of all the people.

The affair that will mark the third anniversary of the organization of the club will be modest. A quiet feed with some music and other entertainment will be held on the evening of April 10th, and any person desiring to become a member of the club will be welcomed on that occasion.

At the meeting last Tuesday night no returns had been received from Senator Duncan and Assemblyman Tarke concerning the protest registered by the club against the dissolution of the Sacramento and San Joaquin Drainage District, but it was known to all the members that both these representatives were proponents of the dissolution and consequently would take but little notice of the protest.

A supply of gas for lighting and heating purposes is anticipated by the club because workmen of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company have been busy along the waterfront at the foot of Y street, evidently preparing to extend the main across the bottom of the Sacramento River.

Complaint was again made that stock are being staked out in vacant lots and close to the railroad tracks. Should these stock become loose there is danger of accidents with the probability that the owners will be the sufferers.

A letter of sympathy was ordered sent to Mrs. D. W. Knox on the death of her husband, which occurred a few days ago.

A communication was received from Senator Duncan asking the advice of his constituents relative to a bill now before the State Legislature which requires women to serve on juries like men when called. As a body the club refused to make answer but the ladies present were requested to communicate their individual ideas to the Senator.

CANDIDATES FOR FIRE TRUSTEES ARE LAGGING

The election to be held Monday, April 2, for three trustees to conduct the affairs of the fire department is not at all a spirited one.

During the past three years Dave Barry, Ray Peek and F. R. Wilson have acted in the position and did so with credit to themselves and the town.

Lately, Peek took unto himself a wife and moved to Sacramento, since which time he has been a member of the department only in name.

Wilson has not been over active, thus throwing nearly all the work on the shoulders of Dave Barry.

Barry will consent to election but is not over anxious to act because of his experience during the past year.

Two other young men who are interested in the welfare of the town should step into the breach because their services are badly needed and even though there is no remuneration there is a least a certain amount of pride which attaches itself to the position and which helps to make a young man feel proud of himself.

The polls will open at 12 o'clock next Monday and remain open until six.

THE TAXPAYERS OF WASHINGTON UNANIMOUSLY DECIDE TO OPPOSE ASSESSMENT FOR WEIR DAMAGE

THEY BELIEVE THE AMOUNT ASKED TO BE UNJUST, UNWARRANTED, EXORBITANT AND UNDESERVING

At a mass meeting of the taxpayers of Washington held in the Town Hall Thursday evening, March 29th, it was unanimously decided that the imposition of $987.23 on the levee district for damage to a weir at Rocky Point be refused payment.

And further it was decided that the levee trustees must communicate this decision to the War Department, advising that all the damage done the weir was not caused by the dredger that did the work of raising and strengthening the levees.

And further, it was decided that, if it became necessary, the levee district would fight the tax with all due process of law, even to the Supreme Court of the United States.

And further it was decided that great damage had been done the town of Washington by the construction of weirs that had purposely been built by the federal engineers and which weirs had for their purpose the diversion of the natural deep water channel of the Sacramento River to the Sacramento shore, thus ruining the water front of the town of Waashington.

The mass meeting had been called by the levee trustees following receipt of the attached communication:

WAR DEPARTMENT
3rd San Francisco District Engineer Office, United States Army, and California Debris Commission.
San Francisco, California.
January 3, 1917.

The Trustees,
Washington Levee District,
Broderick, California.

Gentlemen:

Having reference to previous correspondence on the subject of damage to the government wing dam in the Sacramento River at Rocky Point, near Broderick, Calif., I enclose an itemized statement of cost of repairing same and request that you give the matter your earliest consideration.

The circumstances surrounding this case have been discussed by this office with you and your attorneys quite thoroughly, you were afforded an opportunity to make the necessary repairs at your own expense, and when it became apparent that you did not choose to take such action, the United States, by reason of the latenescs of the season and the necessity for prompt atcion in the premises, proceeded to repair the wing dam at its own expense, as it is authorized by law to do in such cases.

It is requested that reimbursement of the amount, $987.28, be made by you without delay.

Very respectfully,
L. H. RAND,
Major, Corps of Engineers.

1 Inclosure.

The taxpayers of Washington were impelled to the above action for several reasons:

Neither they nor the levee trustees hired the dredger that did the damage.

Neither they nor the levee trustees paid for the work of raising or strengthening the levee.

Even during the progress of the work of raising the levee the captain of the dredger was warned by the levee trustees not to damage the weir.

Rocky Point being considered a dangerous place during flood season the people had the right to tear out anything and everything to protect themselves from flood.

And in the presence and within the sight of several people the damage done to the outer end of the weir was not caused by the dredger but was caused by the flood waters of the Sacramento River — natural causes.

It was explained last night that the dredger was hired by Eli Fourness, J. Harbinson and W. E. M. Beardslee, none of them trustees of the Washington Levee District.

It was explained also that the damage to the outside end of the weir was done before the dredger went to work, therefore relieving everyone for that damage.

The money paid the Ryer Island Dredger Company for the use of its dredger was raised as follows:

Yolo County	$1,000
Reclamation District 900	1,000
Reclamation District 537	1,000
Reclamation District 811	1,000
Southern Pacific Company	1,000

Youth speak out on year-old Club West

From the City of West Sacramento

On Friday, June 17, the first and only teen center built by the city of West Sacramento Department of Parks and Community Services celebrated its one year anniversary. The celebration began at 6 p.m. and ended at 10 p.m. There were 95 participants who attended the dance on Friday.

The dance was planned and decorated by staff and the newly formed Club West advisory board. The advisory board are students who are ages 11-15 in grades 6-9. On the third Thursday of the month at 2:30 p.m., the Club West advisory board meets at Club West to discuss upcoming activities such as arts and crafts, dances, trips, rules governing the advisory board, the newsletter, posters, and promotion of all Club West activities.

The members of the advisory board are Marsalia Sauceda, Velda Ganz, Ben Mora, Denise Lee, and Curtis Buchholz. Below are some comments from a few of the advisory board members:

Ben Mora: "The first time Club West opened they had a dance to celebrate its grand opening. At first no one knew about it because it was the first time it had opened. Club West has done so much for me since its opening. It has kept me off the streets and out of trouble. Club West has been there for me when I did not have nothing to do. I really enjoy their dances. I have gone to all of the dances at Club West because they allow break-dancing and all my friends go and I have so much fun."

Marsalia Sauceda: "This past year at Club West has been great! Before Club West opened, I was constantly getting into a lot of trouble. When Club West finally opened, I spent all my free time there so I would not get into trouble. Club West offers so much as pool tournaments, weights, a snack bar with all of your favorite goodies, plus a variety of trips...I have gained a lot from Club West. Just recently at the June 15 city council meeting, I invited the mayor and city council members to the one-year anniversary dance and presented them with cupcakes. I was so nervous but now I am not afraid to speak to important people. Prior to Club West, I wanted to be a youth counselor but now after being part of the Club West advisory board, I now want to work as a recreation leader and someday become a recreation supervisor after I graduate from college."

Denise Lee: "My name is Denise Lee and I am new to The Club West advisory board. I was recently participated in a Club West activity for a slight fee. It was a trip to the Roller King skating rink in Roseville. I was there for more than four hours. I had lots of fun, plus the trip included lunch. The advisory board president is Golden State's own Velda Ganz. I really enjoy being on the advisory board. It is my chance to help plan the activities at Club West. We meet once a month on Thursday at 2:30 p.m. During the meetings, we talk about what we would like to do at Club West. We would like to plan a lock-in at Club West for students is grades 6-8. We are already talking about the haunted house. We are now getting ready for the summer and have so many things planned that we would like to get West Sacramento teens involved. Activities planned are the following: camping, skating, Waterworld, a bike trip to San Francisco. Since I am the newest member and was not there for the first, I have a lot of things I would like to see happen, such as getting more teens in the city of West Sacramento involved and off the streets.

Club West is open Tuesday-Friday, and Saturday between 5:30 and 9 p.m. If you would like to attend an advisory board meeting, or participate in Club West activities, please call 373-5877 for additional information.

Navy airman Hoffart's ship visits France, honors D-Day

Navy airman recruit Brandon B. Hoffart, son of Robert and Gerrie Cervantes of West Sacramento, is deployed aboard the aircraft carrier USS George Washington, and recently participated in the commemoration of the 50th anniversary of D-Day.

Fifty years ago, allied forces stormed the beaches at Normandy, France, in the greatest amphibious assault in history. Code-named Operation Overlord, D-Day marked the turning point in the European campaign of World War II. An allied fleet of 2,727 ships and 2,606 smaller landing aircraft transported the invasion force which broke through the Nazi's "impregnable" Atlantic wall and dug a toe-hold in Europe.

In a little more than a month, one million soldiers were carried by sea to France with the weapons and enormous logistic support demanded by modern warfare; the drive to liberate Europe was not turned back.

The 1992 graduate of Delta High School joined the Navy in May 1993.

In defense of his decision to vote in favor of hiring Miller, Williams said before she applied for the position, Dr. Miller came before the board in closed session and asked them if they had any problems with the possibility of his wife working for the district. "The full board unanimously said they did not," said Williams.

The hiring process, district officials say, was standard procedure. In anticipation of 120 new students enrolling in the upcoming school year, the school received permission to add a new Physical Education position as one of four new teaching positions in February--before Dr. Miller was hired.

The position was first made available internally, so that any qualified teachers in the district who wanted the job would have the opportunity to transfer into it.

When nobody in the district took an interest, the position was advertised in numerous places throughout the state, including state colleges, universities and the University of California. After the applications were screened for qualifications, eight applicants were chosen for interviews. Of those eight, the interviewers, including Principal Diane Smith, found her to be the best.

"If David Miller's wife were not the best person for the job, she wouldn't have been hired," said Dr. Kellegher.
